“ Ilse was my mother's best friend. My mother always laughed when she told us that no one could believe they were the same age because Ilse was always so physically fit and tiny. She appeared much younger than my mother ! My memories of Ilse go way back to when I was just little girl, and she introduced me to picking strawberries. No stranger to hard work, she was always an inspiration to me, although the large vegetable garden I'm supposed to have never quite materialized ! Ilse was such a kind woman. I can still remember the phone conversation I had with her when my own mother died (2010). Isle told me how much she had loved my mother. And I will never forget how kind she always was to my mentally disabled brother. Countless times my brother and I would be invited to lunch at Ilse's, and we always went home with a huge bunch of rhubarb from her garden. My mother and I used to tell each other we wished we were more like Ilse !
